Isn't It Funny Something Always Happens Just as Wolgast Is About to Box With McFarland?

AD news—that about Wolgast.
Isn't it funny that something always happens just as the light-weight champion is about to box a bout with Paddy McFarland? For "yaks and yaks" Paddy has camped faithfully on the Cadillac cruetcase's trail, and when it seems that he is just about to land Addison slips slyly back into his shell and is seen no more.

Last time their meeting was deferred at the suggestion of the authorities, and many people still think that Wolgast and his manager didn't shed any other fears of disappointment. This time Wolgast has sustained an apparently severe injury to his right arm while cracking his motor car, which may keep him out of the ring for a month or two.

The most curious thing about this senseless cranking by Wolgast is the event that immediately preceded it. Wolgast discovered in a newspaper a few days ago an item relating to the new Federal law prohibiting interstate commerce in moving pictures of boxing matches. When Ad signed to meet Paddy in a ten-round bout in New York he had a notion that about $100,000 would be fair remuneration for his invaluable services. After much dickering he accepted a guarantee reported to be $25,000, with a $500 bonus for signing. Another report is that Wolgast received his $2000 and a guarantee of $10,000 for his thirty minutes' work, with a percentage, and fifty-one per cent. of the moving picture money.

The champion thought that the pictures would be worth a fortune. He was told that the McFarland-Wolgast pictures did not pay expenses, whereupon he explained: "Huh! But I'm in these, and I'll claim a couple of soaks into Paddy's ribs that'll make 'em worth $100,000."

So, when he learned about the new law and figured out just how much less the pictures would be worth because they could be shown only in New York, Wolgast sat down and scribbled industriously on a telegraph blank. The result of his work was a suggestion that it wouldn't annoy him at all to be offered about $100,000 to make up for the moving picture slump. He didn't make a regular demand—just gave the promoters of the bout a gentle hint.

The gentlemen with the money informed Wolgast that, desolated though they were over the thought that they wouldn't be able to load the champion down with another armful of yellowbacks, such was the unfortunate state of affairs.

And the next day Ad cranked his car.

Of course, this may be merely one of the misfortunes in the career of Wolgast. Perhaps he really hopes for a ten-round bout with McFarland, and won't be happy till he gets it. He had a genuine attack of appendicitis on the day before his bout with Freddie Wains, and was forced to call that off. If the champion really has injured his arm, far be it from all who follow the sport to wish to see him in the ring with McFarland. He'll need two good arms when he meets Paddy. Wolgast may have been a little unfortunate, cracking an arm on a second-rater immediately after winning the championship from Nelson, and having that rebellious appendix, and running counter to his motor car crank. There's no doubt that when he is in action he's as good as they make 'em, and as aggressive and cocky and self-confident a little champion as the ring ever owned.

I have seen a number of people who sat at the ringside when Wolgast boxed Rivers a short time ago, and they one and all say that Wolgast fighting in Los Angeles in a twenty-round bout against Freddie Wains, and was forced to call that off. If the champion really has injured his arm, far be it from all who follow the sport to wish to see him in the ring with McFarland. He'll need two good arms when he meets Paddy. Wolgast may have been a little unfortunate, cracking an arm on a second-rater immediately after winning the championship from Nelson, and having that rebellious appendix, and running counter to his motor car crank. There's no doubt that when he is in action he's as good as they make 'em, and as aggressive and cocky and self-confident a little champion as the ring ever owned.

JOHNNY KILBANE'S light and airy style of boxing in the bout with Dundee and Dundee's big dancing didn't make much of a hit. Kilbane showed too strong an inclination to regard the affair as a burlesque. Those who sat in the ring-side box seats wanted to see what kind of a boxer the new champion is. If he can't do any better than he did against Dundee, he'll never be as popular a champion as Terry McGovern, George Dixon and the rest of the old-timers. Boxing isn't all a matter of head bobbing and interminable feinting without taking advantage of openings.
